Phone Booth Book Share

Project author or developer:

Department of Urban Betterment

Where:

US / United States / New York

Website:

gracefulspoon.com/

Obsolete street furniture is repurposed into community sharing system

With smart phones near universal, one might wonder why public payphones still occupy so much sidewalk space. The Department of Urban Bettermentâ \in [™]s (DUB) Phone Booth Book Share is part of a series of urban interventions that explore obsolete street technology. It might look like a simple repurposing of phone booths into community book shares, but DUBâ \in [™]s motto â \in " nascetur ridiculus mus, â \in emand a ridiculous mouse will be brought forthâ \in • â \in " hints at a grander objective. Architect John Locke invokes Homer to argue, â \in emThe central office has no brain. The paternalistic top-down strategy of traditional urban planning has been a waste of heroic labors. We can match modest labors with exceptional gains by turning even a few of our neighbors into consciously critical observers.â \in •

