GODDY LEYE (1965-2011) Visual artist from Cameroon, has started up a series of projects of community involvement, such as Bessengue City's project, realised in one of the poorest neighborhoods in Douala in which the inhabitants were directly called to collaborate in the creation of spaces and enhance the empowerment process of the district in a long term way. A radio broadcast run by the youngsters was aired daily in order to inspire the entire community along their work. Community involvement is a fundamental aspect of another project, ArtBakery, an artistic residency program that includes public training sessions, public events and exhibitions such as documentaries screening that contribute to shaping a critical understanding of the social reality.
