

Jalisco Ecological Collective

Jalisco Ecological Collective (CEJ) is a survivor of the environmental movement that emerged in Mexico

Project author or developer:
Jalisco Ecological Collective

Where:
MX / Mexico / Mexico City

Website:
cejmexico.tumblr.com/

Jalisco Ecological Collective (CEJ) is a survivor of the environmental movement that emerged in Mexico and the world in the early 80's with the growing environmental degradation and the proliferation of nuclear plant projects to install along and width of the Earth. Since then, the ECJ has preserved not only the name - many environmentalists were renamed environmentalists - but above all, the intention and confidence to move forward. Over time, the ECJ have received and continue to receive those who identify with our way of working rather focused on creativity, dialogue and intense articulation with other individuals, organizations and institutions. Jalisco Ecological Collective is a growing space, a kind of nursery. It is a place where food and shelter, to take power and insist on creating conditions that will maintain the pulse of our hearts in the transition to "a more just society in harmony with nature" as the slogan read Pact Groups Ecologists in 1998 -now extinct and that the collective part.

