Activists, sympathisers and also critics of social movements share hopes and commitments that are crucial for political and cultural debate, and the mission of Other News is to defend this debate and provide a space for the new generation of informed, conscious and active individuals who make up civil society.

Other News does not take a stance vis-à-vis the arguments provoked by this debate, but defends the right to their expression as a sign of the rebirth of a thinking society that has the capacity to be outraged.

Elevating information to the level of objective responsibility that functions as an instrument of consciousness for citizens is a monumental task. It cannot be accomplished from the top of the pyramid by merely replacing the media moguls of today – it has to be tackled at the base by revitalising citizens who no longer want to make the effort, anaesthetised by decades of decline.

Other News aims to be a virtual global “newspaper” for the millions at the bottom of the pyramid, a space where they can find a reflection of their values, ideas, issues and concerns.
