

Rebirth Day

A day to celebrate the responsible change of society

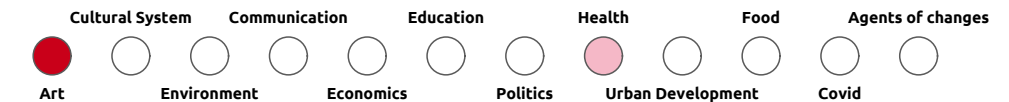

Rebirth Day was created in 2012 as an international day for the celebration of change and has since seen the collaboration of thousands of people, cultural associations and institutions from all over the world. On the 21/12/2012 all the participants in the project gathered physically and metaphorically around Michelangelo Pistoletto's symbol of the Third Paradise, bringing together a message of hope and commitment to build a new world which goes beyond the juxtaposition between nature and artifice, through a process which sees art at the centre of a responsible transformation of society. From India to Finland, from Cameroon to Portugal, from Italy to the Balkans, the project Rebirth Day has generated meetings, performances, installations and debates celebrating the various expressions triggered by the commitment to build a society in balance with the planet. In 2013 Rebirth Day has gone on promoting actions and collecting their testimonies in order to guarantee sharing and visibility, and to celebrate and foster a global commitment to change.
